Course Overview

The industry quietly looks after vast amounts of High Net Worth Private Client wealth, shirking the headlines & aiming for confidentiality & discretion. While fees earned from managing Client funds are clearly the predominant revenue generator, there are other services which can be offered to make the account 'stickier'. Underpinning all of this however is the critical objective of managing the Clients themselves. Managing relationships is a very different proposition to managing their money.

Understanding the importance of today's Client Relationship Managers

- How does one define 'High Net Worth'?
- How big is the market? Who are the major players?
- Where is the revenue growth to come from? What are the implications of this?
- What makes a good Client Relationship Manager?
- Generation Y & the potential impact of inter-generational wealth transfers
- Case Study – What might make Clients think about leaving?

Wealth Management Products and Services

- What are the principal risks facing the industry?
- How many providers is a Client going to use & why?
- How do you differentiate your Bank from the competition?
- Family Office – combining the roles of Accountant, Lawyer, Banker
- The impact of Technology. Robo Advisers & the Omni Channel Adviser
- Case Study – The ideal professional service provider – Listener or Talker?
